Hitherto the addresses of our leading statesmen and orators have only been preserved in the columns of the daily press, or, if spoken in Parliament, in the elaborate and expensive volumes of Hansard s Debates. To refer to such sources for information is often an inconvenient and expensive process, whilst in the case of the Reports in Parliament a large portion of the volumes in which these speeches appear is necessarily occupied with matters of pure business, possessing but slight interest for the general reader. To bring, therefore, all the best utterances of the time on questions of general interest within the reach of all those who care to possess them, is the...
