In the background are dimly perceived the tall buildings of the cities on each bank. During the Act, morning brightens behind the towers and chimneys and a pale gray mist slowly lifts. The city wakes - noises of traffic are heard louder and clearer - girls pass on the way to work. Barges glide by in the river drawn by puffing tug-boats - ferries swarm and whistle shrilly - the crowd grows denser and blacker. Now and then a workman crossing the Long Bridge stops to look at something of great interest farther up stream. Enter Hilda, a dark, resolute figure against the bright sky. She comes eagerly across the bridge and stops, leaning her elbows on the railing. About the Publisher: Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
