Not illustrated. 1836 Excerpt: . . . of Surrey, begging, with a dog, by which he obtained the appellation of Dog Smith. This story, we believe, first appeared in print in Gibsons Britannia, being a translation from the Latin of Camden, with additions, London, fol. 1695. The additions to Surrey were made by the celebrated John Evelyn, and he is the earliest authority it can be traced to. At p. 166 of that work, the following passage occurs: And here in the close we must not omit set, procured the insertion of that place. Sir Henry Hene, that of Wingfield, co. Berks, in which parish he resided. Several of the trustees were Sussex men, hence thirteen parishes in that county were included in the list; and through the influence of Lord Lumley, Chester-le-Street (the burial place of the Lumleys) and other parishes in the county of Durham had allowances assigned them. It would...
